ONE MORE THING: Mariano Ramirez is the posterboy for reapin' what you sow. Back in '86 he planted his first hectare of coffee & used profit from this & his multiple side-hustles to lay the ground for bigger things. He spruiked woven sleeping mats in El Salvador & picked up salt, shoes & other rare merch to sell to his rural community. With this moolah he farmed various crops & livestock, which earned him enough to plant more coffee. Cut to today & he's processing cherries to parchment from his 20 hectare coffee farm.
